Food companies sometimes run competitions and special offers to encourage you to try their products. You might have seen crisps or sweet packets that say "find the hidden tenner" or "are you feeling lucky?" But what are the chances of you winning? Here's a quick game of chance, to give you some idea.

Above, there are about 1,000 rectangles. Imagine each rectangle represents one crisp packet. Choose one of the packets at random. This is the crisp packet with a tenner in it. On a separate sheet of paper, write down which line it's in (a letter) and which column it's in (a number).

Keep the letter and number secret. Then get a friend to guess which packet you chose.

Did they get it first guess? . . . . . .
Did they get it second guess? . . . . . .
How many times did they try until they found the right crisp packet? . . . . . .
(or did they just get bored and give up?!)
